

Thair Phillips

Biography

After spending 8 years in the Air force as a B-52 bombardier and a war planning specialist Thair Phillips worked extensively in the computer field as a system developer, project manager, and later formed his own business. He worked as a contractor on multiple projects for both public and private entities including the Department of Labor, GSA, and the EPA.

Mr. Phillips later transitioned into the public policy arena. He spent a year as the executive director of the National Subacute Care Association, an organization for promoting the use of subacute care facilities to offset the high cost of prolonged stays in hospitals. He then spent three years as the CEO of the Seniors Coalition, a 3 million member seniors organization that was formed to protect the quality of life and economic well-being of seniors while supporting common sense solutions to the challenges of the future.

Mr. Phillips then served for over 10 years as President and CEO of RetireSafe, a non-profit advocacy organization dedicated to preserving the options and benefits of older Americans through advocacy, education, and the power of free markets.

Mr. Phillips now stays involved in the senior advocacy arena, writing, presenting and giving a voice to older Americans on the issues that affect their lives.